“The most important single ingredient in the formula of success is knowing how to get along with people.” Theodore Roosevelt

I work with the “people side” of the equation. Technical skills and strategy will take a person or a company only so far. The “people side” of the equation makes the real difference, when it comes to individual, and organizational, success.

Consider the impact on your organization, if everyone understood and respected each other, communicated more effectively, resolved conflict peacefully, and willingly invested discretionary effort toward greater productivity and profitability.
